Over Half of A3 Communications' Employees Earn Sought-after IT Certifications

COLUMBIA, SC (January 2, 2013) — A3 Communications, a Columbia-based information technology (IT) and communications firm, announced today that over half of their employees have recently earned various IT-related certifications.

Nineteen of A3's employees were recently recognized as exacqVision Certified Technical Engineers. exacqVision, a software designed to manage surveillance camera footage, allows the user to view, store, replay and watch multiple video camera steams at once, amongst other advanced features.

exacqVision Certified Technical Engineers are fully trained in each variation of the software – Start, Pro and Enterprise – and can easily configure, install, manage and troubleshoot each program. Newly certified engineers include: Tommy Abate, Blake Barrett, Chris Brown, Bobby Caughman, Scott Grainger, Joshua Hanley, Tabitha Hartgrove, Chad Hendrix, Robert Huckaby, Gerrod Keith, Jonathon Keith, Mike Massari, Cameron Mays, Brannon Miller, Charles Pagan, Scott Rives, Billy Sayle, Tristan Soule and Shannon Stroud.

Additionally, Devin Isentol, one of A3's System Engineers, has become a Cisco Certified Network Associate (CCNA). This highly sought-after designation validates Isentol's ability to install, configure, operate and troubleshoot medium-size route and switched networks, including implementation and verification of connections to remote sites in a wide area network. The CCNA curriculum includes basic mitigation of security threats, introduction to wireless networking concepts, terminology as well as tests performance-based skills.

"We're so proud of our staff and their recent accomplishments. These certifications not only verify their knowledge, but allow our clients to feel that they're working with the very best in the industry. We take our jobs seriously and these accreditations help prove that," said Brian Thomas, President of A3 Communications.
